Scanvec Amiable Announces A new Software Training Partnership with the Graphic Intelligence Agency

Philadelphia, PA – March 12, 2004 – Scanvec Amiable welcomes the Graphic Intelligence Agency ("GIA") as a new partner and as an official Certified PhotoPRINT and Color Management training company. The GIA will be holding two-day training classes focused on the PhotoPRINT Family and Color Management. In these personal hands-on training classes GIA's expert instructors will teach how to configure the PhotoPRINT Family RIP, setup various print workflows, edit each job, maintain color calibration of your system, and much more.

"The GIA feels privileged to start supporting and training others on Scanvec Amiable's PhotoPRINT Family of software solutions and color management tools," states, Will Holland, President of the GIA.

"Scanvec Amiable is truly confident having the GIA, an industry known provider of training and support, now educating others on our renowned PhotoPRINT software and color management expertise," states Danny Harel, VP of Marketing and Business Development. "We are very pleased and eager to begin our co-operation training classes with the GIA and happy to be able to facilitate these additional services in appreciation to our customers."
